Violent Extremism in Bangladesh: Drivers

Socio-economic factors

- such as poverty and youth under employment act as the push factors for youth to join violent extremist (VE) groups.

Political factors

- such as corruption and electoral violence exacerbate the lack of trust in the government by the citizens.

Cultural factors

- such as religious differences and the influx of Rohingya refugees also increase the potential of radicalisation.

Story of Change – Transforming Hearts: Monk Sree Taposh Sen’s Journey in PVE

In the serene setting of Rajarkul Union Historical Rangkut Buddhist temple, nestled in the heart of Cox’s Bazar, a silent revolution unfolds. At the forefront of this transformation stands Monk Sree Taposh Sen, the revered residential chief of the temple. Monk Sree Taposh Sen’s journey towards PVE began in November 2019 when he joined the YPSA CEVEC project as a religious leader of Ramu. Initially uncertain about the nuances of violence and extremism, Monk Sree Taposh Sen’s understanding deepened through orientation and training provided by YPSA CEVEC, leading to an increase in his commitment to safeguarding his community against the dangers of anomy, smuggling, and terrorist activities.

Driven by a sense of duty, Monk Sree Taposh Sen embarked on a mission to spread awareness and understanding of peace. He engaged in dialogue with fellow monks and followers during each sermon, urging them to disseminate the messages of PVE to their acquaintances and practitioners, fostering a culture of resilience against VE and promoting brotherhood among all. Reflecting on his journey, Monk Taposh expressed, “I received training and information on PVE from the YPSA CEVEC project, and I shared these insights with my fellow monks. I urged them to disseminate these messages to their followers and practitioners. Furthermore, I engaged in discussions about this issue with my followers and practitioners, and I am committed to continuing these efforts.”

Monk Sree Taposh Sen’s advocacy for peace and unity reverberates beyond the temple walls, inspiring the larger community to join the cause, as he continues to plant the seeds of change, nurturing a future where violence and extremism hold no sway.

Peace clubs established by Rupantar conducts inter-faith dialogue, campaign against online misinformation, courtyard meeting, medical camp, cycle rally, reading corner, debate competition, wall painting, leaflet development and distribution etc. engaging youths, local government representatives, religious leaders and activists:

“It is the best initiative for promoting social cohesion in the society by empowering the youth dividends on PVE issues. In this intervention, we are always here to support them.”

– Amitabha Bissas, Youth Development Officer, Khulna City Corporation

GCEF’s Added Value in Bangladesh

GCEF invests in building a PVE-focused community of practice with CSOs, government agencies, and experts

GCEF focuses on building institutional capacity e.g., CSOs, and government agencies.

All project design and implementation are done in coordination with nationally-aligned, locally-led programmes.

GCEF connects CSOs, communities, and other stakeholders with government and security actors, leading to better coordination and relationships.

Communities are at the forefront of project design and implementation, and the programme works with existing community structures for sustainability. GCEF’s consortium model and capacity-building approach enables us to work in remote areas.
