Violent Extremism in Kosovo: Drivers

Returnees from foreign conflict zones
Over 250 people returned to Kosovo from foreign conflict zones, particularly from Syria and Iraq.

Post and pre-conflict context:
Political instability and inadequate reconciliation caused by previous conflicts have polarised communities along ethnic, religious, and cultural lines.

Socio-economic drivers:
High unemployment, limited trust in institutions, and established crime networks contribute to violent extremist narratives.

89th
On the Global Terrorism Index 2024

GCERF partners build the capacity of governmental and non-governmental actors of Prevention of Violent Extremism (PVE) and Rehabilitation and Reintegration (R&R); provide direct assistance to returnees from conflict zones covering psycho-social, educational, and livelihood support; contribute to reducing stigmatization of returnees and promote inter-ethnic tolerance and social cohesion.

“The outcomes of extracurricular courses for RFTF children include immediate improvements in educational skills, particularly in language and mathematics. Engaging in activities like basketball training enhances social engagement, contributing to a broader knowledge base. The positive experiences derived from these courses foster increased confidence and a sense of inclusion, especially as these children integrate into new environments. The structured routine established through participation may promote discipline and time management skills.”
On May 9–10, 2023, ATRC and CBM representatives participated in a two-day workshop titled “Managing the Needs of Child Returnees” in Paris, organized by the Radicalisation Awareness Network. The workshop covered various aspects, including an overview of France’s institutional framework for Return and Reintegration (R&R). This framework encompassed elements such as the justice system, mental health support, national and local mechanisms. Additionally, the workshop featured interactive sessions, including roundtables with frontline workers and a reflection period on how the practices observed in France could be applied in the context of the Western Balkans.

Story of Change

Parental Capacity Building and Training

Capacity-building activities and trainings for RFTF parents/women have successfully conveyed the importance of their children’s development and well-being. The enthusiastic response and requests for more activities demonstrate a keen interest in acquiring skills and knowledge. RFTF parents actively engaged in sessions, expressing a strong willingness to apply concrete strategies for better understanding their children’s development. By expanding their network, enhancing parenting skills, and fostering empowerment, these activities contribute to reducing vulnerability to violent extremism, redirecting focus towards improving the quality and well-being of both parents and children.

Token of appreciation for the CDF trainer that reads: “We are happy to have been part of this training that will help us to reach our goals and sustainable success” Thank you – we appreciate your professional and tireless work.

Inclusive Extracurricular Activities

The participation of RFTF children in extracurricular and informal educational activities has brought positive changes to both the children and their parents. This involvement has enhanced resilience, reduced susceptibility to negative influences, and strengthened their sense of belonging. By providing opportunities for socialization and community engagement, these activities empower RFTF children, fostering inclusiveness and reducing feelings of isolation. The active support of parents in their children’s participation further builds community and shared purpose.

GCRF’s Added Value

GCRF focuses on building institutional capacity e.g. CSOs, government agencies, All project design and implementation are done in coordination with nationally-aligned, locally-led programmes

GCRF invests in building a PVE-focused community of practice with CSOs, government agencies, and experts

GCRF connects CSOs, communities, and other stakeholders with government and security actors, leading to better coordination and relationships

Communities are at the forefront of project design and implementation, and the programme works with existing community structures for sustainability

GCRF’s consortium model and capacity-building approach enables us to work in across the country
