GCERF Global Community of Practice:
Gender Mainstreaming in Theory and Practice
22.04.2024
Agenda

➢ Overview: Gender & Gender Mainstreaming
➢ Gender & Gender Mainstreaming on the International Stage
➢ Gender Mainstreaming : In Theory & Practice
➢ Gender Mainstreaming in Practice: Case Study & Break Out Rooms
➢ Closing Plenary
Scope of today’s Global Community of Practice

- Introductory
- Collaborative

Not
- Exhaustive or Extensive
- Technical / M&E-oriented

Language and context is important. Ensure gender mainstreaming is always locally-rooted and context-specific.
Objectives

➢ Gain a basic understanding for Gender and Gender Mainstreaming
➢ Explain why gender mainstreaming is important for effective PVE
➢ Communicate how promoting gender equality and equity is linked to PVE
➢ Discuss challenges to the Women, Peace and Security Agenda and how it relates to PVE
➢ Identify solutions to integrating gender into PVE policies, programs and interventions

ISIS (variously referred to also as so-called “Islamic State”, ISIL or Daesh) successfully appealed to young urban men by portraying its fighters as honourable “real” men and protectors of the community. They promised recruits a monthly income, a wife and a home – traditional markers of the passage to adulthood that many young men were struggling to achieve.

Inequality and Societal Power Imbalances

➢ Societal power imbalances exacerbates inequalities, (especially during times of conflict).

➢ Societal power imbalances create more challenges for women and girls.

Women Peace and Security Agenda

- Women, Peace and Security (WPS) is an international agenda.
- Commonly referred to as Security Council Resolution 1325.
- The WPS agenda is informed by 10 UN Security Council resolutions 1325, 1820, 1888, 1889, 1960, 2106, 2122, 2242, 2467, and 2493.

Gender Mainstreaming linked to WPS

➢ Patchwork Agendas,
➢ Propagate Stereotypes/biases,
➢ Box Ticking Exercises,
➢ Lack of political willingness,
➢ Backlash against women’s rights.

Abstract: Since the early 2000s, disappointment has grown about the realization of the transformative potential that was ascribed to gender mainstreaming at its launch at the Beijing conference in 1995. The critiques on gender mainstreaming tend to represent gender mainstreaming as a ‘mythical beast’, and as such take for granted the social change it is intended to produce. This special issue seeks to look both beyond and inside the mythical beast. By approaching policy making as a social practice embedded in discursive politics, we seek to advance the theoretical underpinnings of gender mainstreaming and argue for a rethinking of agency and transformation. <td>Projects, programmes, policies and attitudes that are gender blind do not take into account gender norms, roles and inequalities, maintain the status quo and will not help transform the unequal structure of gender relations.</td>
<td>Gender norms, roles and inequalities have been considered, and awareness of these issues has been raised, although appropriate actions may not necessarily have been taken.</td>
<td>Gender norms, roles and inequalities have been considered, and measures have been taken to actively address them. Such programmes go beyond raising sensitivity and awareness, and aim to do something definitive and practical about reducing gender inequalities.</td>
<td>Gender norms, roles and inequalities have been considered, and measures have been taken to transform the root causes of gender inequality, harmful gender roles, norms and relations, fostering progressive changes in power relations between men, women, and gender-diverse people.</td>

<tr>
<td>Focus groups that exclude females, assuming that only males can exercise decisions related to households or community.</td>
<td>Focus groups that bring all community members together in one space—this could put diverse groups of women/girls and/or men/boys at risk when gender related social norms, roles and behaviours are discussed.</td>
<td>Gender-separated focus groups that happen simultaneously and ask the same questions, but do not further probe gender differentiated experiences.</td>
<td>Gender-separated focus groups that happen at the time best suited for each group. Questions are tailored to surface any gender differentiated experiences; childcare and transportation are offered to everyone.</td>
<td>Same as gender-responsive, plus: intersectionality of gender and other identities is taken into account; composition of the focus group and guiding questions are designed after consultation with an Evaluation Reference Group with an understanding of the gender context in the community. Analysis and validation of focus group data and findings is participatory.</td>

Gender mainstreaming requires that all analyses in policy and practice systematically and explicitly incorporate gender equality as a routine part of the analysis.

Gender analysis is a tool and actionable process to:

➢ Identify major areas of gender-based inequality, discrimination, and exclusion and specific challenges and constraints, as well as the actions needed to address them; and

➢ Reveal opportunities for building on the knowledge, experience, contributions, and leadership of women, men and gender-diverse persons, and for meeting their self-expressed needs, priorities, and aspirations.

Gender Mainstreaming in Programming – 1

Conditions
- Gender expertise
- Adequate resources
- Stakeholder involvement
- Accountability mechanisms

Methods and Tools
- Gender Equality Training
- Gender Awareness Raising
- Gender Indicators
- Sex-disaggregated data
- Et al.

1. Gender Analysis

2. Programme / Project Design – Gender Objectives and Indicators

3. Implementation – Gender in Monitoring

4. Gender in Evaluation

5. Knowledge Sharing – Gender in Reporting

Results
- Better programming
- More effective processes
- Better-functioning institutions

Gender Mainstreaming in Institutions

Key Priority 3: Ensure Adequate Funding for Gender Mainstreaming

Required Action | Responsible | Means of verification | Supporting Actions
--- | --- | --- | ---

Financial Resource Tracking and Allocation

A.1: Hold consultations across the UN Secretariat to find best practices in tracking and allocating the 15 per cent financing target for gender;
Responsibility: Gender Unit
- Highlights from the consultations are shared with senior management and SPPSS;
- Global Compact Gender Working group will support the definition of relevant entities to be consulted;

A.2: Develop a baseline assessment of current funding allocation for gender;
Responsibility: SPPSS and Gender Unit
- Baseline assessment is shared with senior management;

A.3: Develop a dedicated financial resource tracking and allocation tool for gender, which is integrated into the Office’s programming budget;
Responsibility: SPPSS, Gender Unit, UMOJA IPMR team
- Financial resource tracking and allocation tool is put in place;
- USG and DUSG will revise and approve the tool;

A.4: Develop expenditure guidance tool for the allocation of the 15 per cent;
Responsibility: Gender Unit and SPPSS;
- Expenditure guidance tools set out the requirements for the expenditure to count towards the 15 per cent;

A.5: Track financial expenditure on gender;
Responsibility: SPPSS
- Financial allocation for gender is reported periodically;

A.6: Devise and put in motion a plan to comply with the Secretary General’s call for a 15 per cent financing target for gender by 2024;
Responsibility: USG and DUSG
- Financial allocation for gender is measurable, attributable and corresponds to at least 15 per cent of the programming budget;

Some Risks and Considerations

➢ It is important to be critical at all times about how a PVE project relies on stereotypes about women and men and find ways to challenge those stereotypes (e.g. programming is based upon the notion that women are either/only mothers or victims).

➢ It is important that women’s rights and gender equality efforts do not become a ‘security instrument’ in the service of PVE work, and that this work does not become militarized or securitized. Building such an association in policy, but also in people’s minds, may put women’s rights activists at greater personal risk of violence and retaliation, and undermines their very cause.

✔ Conduct careful risk-assessments when it comes to CSO engagement, ensuring that new PVE engagement does not place CSOs and activists at risk, nor disrupt their current gender equality efforts.

Case Study: Guiding Questions

1. Consider how gendered power dynamics are at play in this case study (Context)

2. Reflect on the local CBO’s Programme–PEACE

- How can thinking about gendered power dynamics improve Programme–PEACE?
- How would you mainstream gender in Programme–PEACE and/or the local CBO? (What additional steps/information would you need?)

At every level: what are the challenges, unintended consequences, institutional structures, power dynamics you would need to consider?
