

GCERF in Tunisia

The second round of funding in Tunisia runs from January 2022 to December 2025 and aims at strengthening trust between youth, community leaders and governance actors, and to increase socio-economic opportunities for at-risk youth.

GCERF is supporting three consortia of local NGOs in the underserved Western governorates to provide skills training, mentoring and links to sustainable livelihoods and income generating activities; develop joint planning between a range of local actors; and create support networks for young people and their families.

Investment Focus

Enabling prevention, resilience-building and community-based integration through greater vertical social cohesion and community agency

Tunis, Jendouba, Kef, Kasserine, Sidi Bouzid, Gafsa

Religious leaders, local authorities, victims of violent extremism, and vulnerable, out-of-school youth

2022–2025

The FEJ consortium has concluded partnerships with the Ministry of Education, the Defense and Social Integration Committee (CDIS Naasen), the Youth Home of Hrairia, the women's regional directorate of Ben Arous.

Violent Extremism in Tunisia: Drivers

Social factors such as feelings of marginalization, exclusion and difficulty in accessing social support systems contribute to the potential for radicalisation.

Political factors such as lack of responsiveness of local authorities, perceived lack of governance, and limited trust in the government exacerbate the attraction of joining extremist groups.

Unfavorable economic factors such as unemployment and lack of sustainable opportunities encourage youth without perspectives to engage in VE.

On the Global Terrorism Index 2023.

Current Programming: Systems Approach

National: To date, formal state actors have had limited engagement with PVE programming. By increasing their understanding of PVE and their capabilities to plan activities and integrate PVE approaches into wider, sustainable networks of experienced multi-sectoral actors and PVE plans will be developed in the target areas, and sustainably funded.

Governorate: Building on GCERF's initial investment in Tunisia, the program will further strengthen national ownership at state and local levels, with a focus on capacity development and support to local authorities, and CSOs to be able to jointly respond to VE challenges beyond the lifespan of GCERF's second investment.

Community: The past two years of programming have shown that while the majority of donor projects have been able to achieve their objectives individually, to achieve the type of larger-scale social change required to respond to the VE threat in Tunisia, greater cross-sector coordination and institutional engagement are necessary. Funding is covering a four-year programme to develop sustainable P/CVE responses through multi-stakeholder (state and non-state) cooperation and planning at the community level.

Individual: A project supporting teenagers aged 14 to 18 who have dropped out of school, by providing them with ad hoc support enabling them to return to school, access vocational training or, for the older ones, integrate into the job market. The objective is to give these young people prospects for the future and to regain their self-confidence before they are tempted to join VE groups.

GCERF's Added Value

GCERF focuses on building institutional capacity e.g., CSOs, and government agencies.

GCERF invests in building a PVE-focused community of practice with CSOs, government agencies, and experts

Communities are at the forefront of project design and implementation, and the programme works with existing community structures for sustainability

All project design and implementation are done in coordination with nationally-aligned, locally-led programmes

GCERF connects CSOs, communities, and other stakeholders with government and security actors, leading to better coordination and relationships

GCERF's consortium model and capacity-building approach enables us to work in remote areas
